Engagement Announced.

No surprise attended the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mabei Pidgeon, one of the season's debutantes, to Mr. John E. McCall, son of Judge and Mrs. J. E. McCall, the engagement having been discussed for the past week in social circles, though having been-denied by the bride-elect to all but her intimate friends.

The wedding has been planned for the latter part of December and will be one of the most brilliant nuptials of the season.

Weddings

Frank-Mauss.

A wedding notable for its beauty of appointment and elaborateness of detail, was that on Sunday evening at to clock, when Miss Evelyn Mauss became the bride of Mr. James A. Frank of Milwaukee, Rabbl W. H. Fineshribe of ficiating.

The handsome home of the bride's aunt. Mrs. Max Heilbronner, on Poplar avenue, which was the scene of the interesting event, had been lavishly decorated for the occasion with pains, ferms and giant pink chrysanthemums, an improvised altar banked with the large specimen blossoms and greenery in the living room marking the place of ceremony.

An orchestra rendered the weedling music, "Traumered" being softly played during the ceremony, following the strains of the bridal chorus from 'Lobengrin,' to which the bridal party passed down the colonial stsirway into

The bride's mother, Mrs. H. B. Mauss, who was the matron of honor, was handsomely gowned in a robe of jetted net and carried a sheaf bouquet of Premier roses, with a shower of pink tulle falling to the hem of her gown.

The maid of honor, Miss Ruih Goodman, cousin of the bride, wore a French frock of coral satin with crystal garniture and carried a colonial bouquet of Sweetheart roses and violets in a ruffled pink tulle holder.

The flower girl, little Miss Serette Koeman, wore a dainty frock of white net over pink silk and carried a basket wreathed in smilax and tulle and filled with pink rose petals.

Dr. Barl U. Scharff attended Mr. Frank as best man.

The ceremony was followed by a reception, the guests being cordially greeted by the bride's parents and her two aunts, Mrs. Heibronner, gowned in black jetted net over white satin trimmed in ostrich, and Mrs. Ben Goodman, wearing a black lace robe with diamond ornaments.

After viewing the magnificent array of wedding gifts, the guests enjoyed an elaborate wedding banquet. The members of the brids! party were seated at a large table having a centerpiece of giant pink chrysanthemums arranged in an immense basket, while the pink color note was repeated in the tapers burning in colonial holders with pink silk and crystal shades and in the rosecups at the places holding saited nuts and pink minths. The other guests were seated at smaller tables adorned with baskets of roses.
